Overview:

Cambodian Press was not a local based Khmer language newspaper, but it was a student paper published in Lowell, MA, USA. No information on its founding date and also its circulation volume was found during this research. Yale University Library holds only one issue of the paper (Vol. 6, no. 79) that was published on August 15, 1993. According this issue, we could guess that the paper could have been published since the late 1980s. However, this cannot be confirmed.

Without sufficient information, it is difficult to understand and explain the coverage of this paper. However, based on the available issue the paper seemed to have a strong voice against Vietnam. It was also critical of the Indochinese strategies and Hanoi government. The paper also raised about the consequences and sufferings experienced by the Cambodians during the war.

There was no source confirming on the political stand of the paper. It is also impossible to make any assumption with a single issue in hand.
