Overview:
"Damnoeng Thmei" is published weekly in black and white with pages length. According to the survey by Clarke (1995) its circulation was 286, but the list posted on the homepage of the Ministry of Information (2011) showed that the paper was printed twice a week with a circulation of 3,000 copies.

Very much like other typical local newspapers, "Damnoeng Thmei" is largely filled by opinion-based articles and Khmer literature. News articles focus on local news only. The literary section often provides readers a fiction. The editorial often comments on the local social and political issues and sometimes these issues are expressed through its cartoon that appears irregularly.

No source has confirmed on its political affiliation, but the contents of the paper itself weights heavily on the Cambodian People Party (CPP). It is also important to note that the publisher and editor-in-chief of the paper, Mr. Keo Phum, who died of high blood pressure in late 1995, as reported by "Koh Santepheap Daily" (Oct 6, 1995), had served as an official of the Tramkok District Office of Propaganda and Information, Takeo Province between 1979 and 1994 and was promoted to Head of Statistics Office in 1994. During the 1970s he was an editor-in-chief of Apsara News. Currently the paper is headed by Sok Samnang, according to the Ministry of Information homepage (2012). It is also worthwhile mentioning that Keo Phum was a former editor-in-chief of "Sethakech News" while Sok Samnang was a governor in prior to September 1994.
