Overview:
The Wild Buffalo is a weekly Khmer language newspaper printed in black and white with four page length. The first issues printed on 23 September 1993. The homepage of the Ministry of Information (2011) shows that the paper no longer in operation. However, when exactly the paper ceased is unclear.

The main coverage of the paper included local news report, Khmer literary, and the editorial commentary. The news report covered mainly social and political issues and the activities related to the senior government officials, the parliamentarians and the king. The literary included a novel and poem sections. The editorials were highly critical of the social and political issues. The paper also provided a cartoon that was critical of the social and political issues. In some issues, selected world news reports were included. There was no commercial advertisement published in the paper.

There is no confirmed source indicate the political affiliation of the paper, but its earlier issues seems to strongly back HE Sam Rainsy, the Minister of Finance then and now is the head of the opposition party “Sam Rainsy Party”. It is important to note that Mr Nun Chan, publisher and editor-in-chief of the paper was shot dead by unidentified gunmen in the Phnom Penh on 6 September 1994 when he was then the editor-in-chief of the Voice of the Khmer Youth. The report by the Committee to Protect Journalists (2011) explains that prior to his murder, he received several official warnings and also anonymous death threats for his reporting on the government corruption.
